PREFACE.

AT the solicitation of a number of friends, and encouraged by a liberal subscription, the publisher has been induced to put to press, a New Directory for the Town of Providence. While it has been his aim to endeavour to make the work correct, he can hardly flatter himself that he has entirely succeeded. He trusts, however that very few omissions or inaccuracies will be found, having employed a young man to obtain the names, in whose diligence and care he can repose full confidence. But in a large and flourishing town, the constant changes occurring, render it almost impossible to give every man's residence correctly. Add to this, it is often difficult for the person applying for information, to obtain correct returns of names—owing partly to the ignorance and sometimes to the timidity of those of whom information is sought. The publisher did hope to annex to the present work, a Charter of City government—but in this he has been disappointed. Perhaps the next Directory may contain it. He was also in hopes, that the numbering of the houses on many streets not yet numbered, would have enabled him to have given a more definite direction, than it is possible now to do. This, no doubt, will be done hereafter. At the close of the work will be found a number of articles, not published in the Directory heretofore, which it is believed will enhance the value of the work. Any hints for the improvement of this work, will at all times be thankfully received.

Providence, November, 1828.

RECOLLECTIONS OF AN OLD INHABITANT.

MR. BROWN—Hearing that you are about to publish a new Directory, I send you the following statement of facts and circumstances within my recollection, and if any part of it will serve to amuse your readers, it is at your service. Yours, Z.

I removed to Providence in May, 1765, at which time the population of the town was about 2000. There was then but one newspaper published here (the Providence Gazette) which had then been published but a few months. It was printed by William and Sarah Goddard; and afterwards for many years by the late John Carter. Mr. Goddard was the first Printer who established a press in Providence, his office was kept in the brick house in North Main-street, opposite the Court-House. At this time there was but one house in Westminster-street, which is the one now occupied by Timothy Gladding, as a tailor's shop. The street was not passable for carriages above Walker-street, being obstructed by a high hill. There was, however, a foot path, which extended some distance farther west. At this time I knew nearly every man in town, and my business calling many strangers to my shop, I could instantly tell, by the peculiarities of their dress and appearance, whether they came from New-York, Boston or Newport. A favourite amusement of young people, was to assemble at private houses for dancing, and it was common then to hear the violin, on winter evenings, at the houses of respectable citizens—but instrumental music in houses of public worship was then totally unknown, and would have been thought by many, the height of profanity. As many vessels were built above the Cove, there was a swing bridge at the spot where the Great Bridge now stands. This was for convenience in conveying these vessels through. At this period, it generally required a week to go to Boston and return, and there was but one mail a week received from that place. The principal trade of the town was with the West-India islands, and the exports were mostly hoops, staves and shooks, and horses and sheep to Surinam. The first importers of goods into the town, (if my memory serves me) were Joseph and William Russell, the latter of whom died but a few years since. There were but four meeting-houses in the town, viz. the Baptist, situated a few rods north of the Episcopal Church, (in which Elder Winsor preached) the Presbyterian (Mr. Rowland) the New Light (Mr. Snow) and the Episcopal Church (Mr. Graves.) All the above houses have been since taken down, with the exception of the Town-House which was occupied by the Presbyterians. There was at this time, no market-house, and the principal mart for the sale of provisions was at the North end, near the residence of the late Gen. Philip Martin. A few stores for the sale of dry goods were scattered through different parts of the town. There was then but one livery stable kept here, and the total number of private carriages would not exceed half a dozen. There was not a single shop for the retail of spirituous liquors, and many other establishments, now places of public resort, and to many, of ruinous dissipation, were for many years after, wholly unknown among us.

[The above was furnished by a gentleman of the advanced age of 85 years, who is still in good health, and is engaged in mechanical business which he has followed for upwards of seventy years.]

HISTORICAL.

The following article was prepared by an aged Friend, who is intimately acquainted with the history of the early settlement of this town and State, and was published several years since, in the Rhode Island Register. As it furnishes some curious facts respecting the settlement of this town, which will undoubtedly be new to many readers, it is thought best to republish it at the present time.]

TOWN OF PROVIDENCE.

ORIGINAL SETTLEMENT.

Roger Williams, John Throgmorton and Richard Waterman, with their families, appear to have sailed from Bristol, (Eng.) December 1, 1630, and arrived at Nantasket, February 5, 1630, and not in 1631, as has been mis-stated, probably from the writers not knowing or considering the change from old to new style, which did not take place in England and America till September, 1752, when eleven days were dropped out of the callendar, to correspond with other nations in the correction of keeping time by Gregory; an act of Parliament having passed for that alteration, and also changing the commencement of the new year from the 25th of March, as was the case before, to the 1st of January, as since observed: and as February by the old style followed December, in the same year; it is natural to suppose the error of a year in the date was thus made, and appears in many other statements by our historians, to correct which, and for information to young readers, I thus mention it. The first six white people who came to Providence were Roger Williams, William Harris, John Smith (miller) which distinction is mentioned, as there were two others who came afterwards of the same name, who were distinguished one by the word mason, and the other by that of Jamaica, whence he came; Joshua Verin (misprinted Udrin in Winthrop's Journal) Thomas Angell and Francis Wickes. The two latter appear to have been under age at that time. They came here from Seekonk, where they had wintered and crossed over East River in the spring or summer of 1636 (and not in 1634 as has been stated) certainly before the month of July, they being then here. It being peaceable times, as they drew near the cove North of India Point, they were saluted by the natives by the social term Watcheer, which is not only transmitted to us traditionally, but in memory of the occurrence, the land there was named and conveyed by the five disposers of land in the town, by Watcheer in their deed, to Benedict Arnold, the first governor of the State under the Charter of King Charles, as appears by a parchment deed now in my possession, dated "the 14th day of the second month, in the 5th year of our situation or plantation at Mes-hasick or Providence, and in the 17th year of King Charles, &c. 1641." The Indian name of the land is therein called Ashocomack. Where they, the first six, landed, after going round Fox Point and up the river, tradition has uniformly stated to be at the spring, as often mentioned S. W. of the Episcopal Church, and at which spot a brick house has been recently built by Mr. Nehemiah Dodge. They were hospitably received and entertained. On the 5 acre, since called 6 acre lot, Roger Williams afterwards built his house. This house was also held by his grandson, Roger Williams, son of Daniel, when Benefit-street, or back street, was laid in 1748. It was afterwards owned by Col Jabez Bowen.* The lot of Roger Williams does not appear to have been owned by the Crawford family, as by mistake has been mentioned. The first comers had each a lot of 5 now 6 acres, extending from the river on the West, to the lane on the East end, between them and the lot on which the Friend's Boarding School has been lately built, and extending down Southward, East of the College, to Tockwotten, now called India Point. Roger Williams' lot was No. 38, Northward from Mile End Cove, at the South end of the town; William Harris' was No. 36; John Smith's No. 41; Joshua Verin's No. 39, adjoining on the North of Roger Williams' lot, which made them near neighbours; Francis Wickes' No. 45. The Court-House appears to be standing on lot No. 34. These six first settlers all became proprietors, though Francis Wicks and Thomas Angell did not receive full shares till they became of age. Roger Williams's deed from the Indians is dated "the 24th day of the first month, commonly called March, the second year of our plantation, or planting at Moshasick." It has no date of the Christian year or King's reign, which is accounted for in a plea in writing before the Court of Commissioners in 1677, when Roger Williams and William Harris were pleading before them. Mr. Williams said the King's party turned him out, and he did not know whether the King would own him, so he took a date of his own, from the plantation, and therefore the date of their coming here was forgot, but they concluded it to be about 40 years or less, being before Rhode-Island was planted; and their deed is dated "the 24th of the first month, called March, 1637;" which doubtless was the same day Roger Williams' deed was dated. He and Randal Holden being the negotiators and witnesses to the Indian deed of Rhode-Island or Aquidneck, to William Coddington and "his friends united unto him," signed by the same persons,

* Col. B. was an eminent surgeon in his day. He closed up and cured the windpipe of Joseph Crawford, cut by a negro, who fired Dr. Gibbs' house, afterwards drowned himself, was taken up, trepanned and dissected, by David Vanderlight, being the first operation of the kind ever performed in this town.

Conanicut and Miantinnomy; but the deed from the island Sachem, Wanamatanomet was witnessed by Randal Holden only, who understood the Indian language, and was employed as a negotiator in that business with Roger Williams. But Williams' deed appears to have no English witness or seal.

It having been asserted by most historians who have touched on the settlement of our town, that Roger Williams gave the rest of the inhabitants their lands, which is a gross error, it will be proper to have it corrected by a statement of such facts as may set that matter right. But the necessity of brevity in a work of this kind, will preclude the possibility of giving many other proofs which might be adduced to show the fallacy of many statements heretofore published. On "the 8th day of the 8th month, 1638," an agreement appears on record, signed by Roger Willsams' own hand, made with twelve other settlers, viz. Ezekiel Holliman, Francis Weston, Richard Waterman, Thomas Olney, Robert Cole, William Carpenter, William Harris, John Throgmorton, John Green, Thomas James, William Arnold, and Stukely Westcott, for the consideration of £20 to be raised and paid by them equally, to Roger Williams, in eight weeks, being the 17th day of the 10th month then next. That all the meadow grounds bounded upon the fresh rivers upon both sides, were to be appropriated to those twelve and Williams himself, making the thirteen persons then incorporated together in "our town of Providence;" and on the 3d day of 10th month, two weeks before the time, is this entry: "According to former agreement, I received of the neighbours above said, the full sum of £18, 11s. 3d. per me, Roger Williams, making up the 12 to 13 parts, he keeping equal right in his own hand; as per receipt on record. He then gave them a grant, mentioning only the initials of each man's name, through haste, and promised to give a more formal evidence; but this was delayed till the 22d of 10th month, 1666, twenty-eight years after, when a deed was given, fully expressing their names, under the same date of the forementioned agreement of 8th of 8th month, 1638, for the consideration of £30 received from the same persons, which conveyed equal right and power of enjoying and disposing of the same grounds and lands that he purchased of the Indians, reaching from river to river, as per deed on record. These conveyances, purchased by the 12 Petuxet purchasers, as they were called, vested them with equal powers with Williams himself. It was observed in the pleas before the Court of Commissioners, that the Indian deed to Roger Williams should have been taken in the name of Roger Williams and his associates, as the Indian deed to William Coddington, of Rhode-Island, was. But Williams, in answer, denied the right of their claim, but allowed that he promised some of them "lands, if he got any." The verdict of the jury was in fa-your of the purchasers of Williams, both from their deed and possession. But Williams' deed from the natives not being well defined as to the extent, and the town finding his deed conveyed only a life estate (and his deed to them could convey no more) they found it necessary and did purchase a new deed of the Sachems, dated the 29th of the 3d month, 1659, made to "the men of Providence and men of Petuxet," extending 20 miles from Fox Hill into the country, to them, their heirs, &c. the cost of which, and other deeds from Indians on the land to secure the title, is stated before the Court in 1677, at £.166, and was said to be more than any other plantation lying near here, all circumstances considered, had cost. Rhode-Island was then said to have cost about £.33, Warwick about £.36, and had but about one third part of the inhabitants that Providence had, which, before the war of 1675, contained 500 souls. When the deed in fee was purchased by the town, in 1659, there were only 41 heads of families who paid their purchase money, which was 30s. per share, and this money went into a town stock. There was a committee of five appointed, called Disposers, who were authorized to sell and dispose of lands for the town, according to the form of government reported by a committee for that and other purposes, on the 27th of 5th month, in the year (so called) 1640. This committee was Robert Coles, Chad Brown, William Harris and John Warner; which is perhaps the first state paper wherein liberty of conscience was held forth, as it had been agreed on by the first settlers a little before this date. The five disposers chosen agreeably to this report, were William Arnold, Roger Williams, William Harris, William Field and William Carpenter, as appears by the parchment deed before mentioned. The aforesaid report may be found in Hazard's State Papers, vol. 4, p. 464.

In further evidence of the fact that Roger Williams was paid as aforesaid by his twelve first associates, per his deed, he also acknowledges in his historical deed of the 20th of December, 1661, as follows: "First about £.30 should be paid unto myself." "I do acknowledge the said sum and payment as full satisfaction." For the sake of brevity, divers other proofs are here omitted. Of taxable persons above 16 years of age, there appears in September, 1650, to have been 51; in the 10th month, 1684, 110; in August, 1688, there were 172. Chad Brown, William Field, Thomas Harris, sen. William Wickendon, Robert Williams, Gregory Dexter, Richard Scott, William Reynolds, Benedict Arnold, Joshua Winsor, John Field and others, to the number of 100, made up the whole proprietors in what is called Providence purchase, the whole of whose names might be inserted, but for the reasons before stated are omitted.

Hair cut in the Neatest Style.

S URE, there is nothing connected with a man's dress, that makes him appear more ridiculous, than a long beard and a bushy head; yet his looks are not much improved by having his hair cut, if he has it hacked off in such a manner, as would lead one to suppose that it had been gnawed or pounded off with a stone. To have hair cut often, and cut well, not only improves the looks, but actually improves the hair and makes it take root more firmly, and is the only sure way to prevent it from falling out.

Now, gentlemen, if you want these improvements made upon the ornamental part of your cranium, which will materially add to the good appearance of both young and old, just call at No. 15, Market-Square, where you can be shaved in the best manner, and have your hair cut in the neatest style, by your humble servant,
